From the creators of 'Mele in the Hale', Hawai'i's first multi-home live-stream series created out of the global pandemic comes their new summer series, Mele in Hawai'i. The first virtual concert in this new summer series was this past Saturday, May 30th celebrating the 2020 graduates in collaboration with Waiwai Collective. The family-friendly virtual concert features Hawai'i's entertainers multi-streamed across Haku Collective's Facebook and Youtube accounts.

The new series was created to celebrate the summer as things begin to open up slowly and to connect our music community with their fans. Although the event is free to attend viewers can leave the artists donations in the virtual tip jar at HakuHawaii.com/donate.

Watch the live-stream replay on Haku Collective's facebook and youtube accounts or directly on hakuhawaii.com/meleinhawaii. Donations to the artists are still being accepted at HakuHawaii.com/donate. Viewers can subscribe to Haku Collective's email list at www.HakuHawaii.com or follow HakuCollective on social platforms to find out about upcoming live-stream events and more!

Established by artists for artists, Haku Collective is united by their shared love of music and their community. Now more than ever musical artists and performers here in Hawai'i need to unite and support each other. So we're turning our self quarantine into a quaranTUNES jam sesh! Additional ways to support our artists are buying or streaming their music online or visiting their websites or social media accounts to purchase merchandise.

Haku is a full-service music, media and talent production group located in Honolulu. We provide access to the creative output from Hawai'i's emerging and leading artists, producers, composers, and musicians. Haku was co-founded by Grammy Nominated Producer and recording artist Kimié Miner. Haku Collective's goal is to support our music community in Hawai'i and to create a collaborative environment for creatives to thrive.
